Instructions

We are studying how people express their emotions in different situations.

On each page is a description of a situation where you are interacting with someone and feel certain emotions toward that person. Please think of a specific person in your life for each of the situations and tell us what you think you should do by selecting one of the seven possible responses that are listed on top of the page. If you want to choose a response not listed, select "OTHER" and write in what you think you should do. If you don't have such a person in your life indicated in the situations, please first make your best guess on what you think you should do. If you find that it is too difficult to do so, please check 'not applicable'.

Treat each emotion and each situation separately. Do not consider them occurring in any particular order or to be connected with each other in any way. There are no right or wrong answers, nor any patterns to the answers. Don't worry about how you have responded to a previous item or how you will respond to an item in the future. Just select a unique response for each emotion and situation on its merit. Don't obsess over any one situation and emotion. If you have difficulty selecting an answer, make your best guess; oftentimes your first impression is best. For a definition of each emotion, please refer to page 2.

Example :

Possible Responses :

- A - Show more than you feel it
- B - Express it as you feel it
- C - Show less than you feel it
- D - Show it but with another expression
- E - Hide your feelings by showing nothing
- F - Hide your feelings by showing something else
- Other - None of the above (please specify)

What do you believe you SHOULD do if you are with:
Your father

- A. At home by yourselves and you feel the following emotion toward him
Anger _____

For this question, you should think of a situation in which you are with your father at home and you feel anger towards him and then choose how you should express your anger using the response choices listed on the top of the page.

Page 2- List of Seven Emotions and their Definitions

ANGER: A feeling of displeasure resulting from injury, mistreatment, opposition, and usually showing itself in a desire to fight back at the supposed cause of this feeling.

Example: The person is waiting in line at the post office for a very long time. The person finally reaches the window, when the clerk announces that there is only time for one more customer. The person is then pushed aside when someone cuts in front to take the person's turn.

CONTEMPT: A feeling or attitude of one who looks down on somebody or something as being low, mean, or unworthy.

Example: The person hears an acquaintance bragging about accomplishing something for which the acquaintance was not responsible.

DISGUST: A sickening distaste, or dislike.

Example: The person steps in dog feces, reaches down to wipe it off, and feces get on the person's hand.

FEAR: A feeling of anxiety and agitation caused by the presence or nearness of danger, evil, or pain.

Example: The person has realized that the brakes don't work while driving down a steep hill. The car approaches the end of the road, which is a cliff with no barrier. The person tries to brake and veers out of control.

HAPPINESS: Having a feeling of great pleasure, contentment, joy.

Example: The person sees many close friends at a party.

SADNESS: Having low spirits or sorrow.

Example: The person remembers the time last year when a young child died of a terminal illness.

SURPRISE: To come upon suddenly, or unexpectedly.

Example: The person is looking at something new and unexpected.
